ABOUT CEBRI

The Brazilian Center for International Relations (CEBRI) is an independent and plural think tank, which has been dedicated to the promotion of a purposeful debate on Brazilian foreign policy for more than twenty years.

CEBRI is a non-profit organization based in Rio de Janeiro and nationally recognized. It proposes pragmatic and innovative solutions to leverage the country's positive international insertion in the global context.

Consisting of prominent figures from Brazilian society, the Board of Trustees is a fundamental part of CEBRI's non-partisan, diverse and pluralistic network, comprising more than 100 experts from various fields of expertise and thought.

INTRODUCTION

The first half of 2021 was marked by CEBRI's expansion, with more creativity, dynamism and proximity to society, especially the new generations of professionals and students. With an integrated and more effective communication strategy, CEBRI launched a new brand identity, a new website and its first online course, expanding the reach of its initiatives.

CEBRI's twelve thematic programs intensified their production: During the first six months of the year, we had seventy-one events, including open to the public discussions and restricted meetings. In the same period, we launched twelve publications, covering topics such as energy transition, agribusiness, the Amazon, and geopolitics. Later this year, these initiatives will result in concrete proposals for public policy formulation to be presented to the presidential candidates.

CEBRI is growing continuously and currently has 112 members representing the most diverse economic sectors. The members are strategic partners who actively contribute to building the agendas and activities of each thematic program. In the first half of 2021, Altera, the Embassy of Korea, Embraer and Suzano became members of CEBRI.

CEBRI's first online course is one of the main highlights of this period. The public's engagement exceeded our highest expectations, showing the course's relevance and its appeal to society, especially young people, regarding the role of Brazilian international and diplomatic relations. We had nearly 1,600 registrants from 27 countries and practically every Brazilian state, and half were aged 25 or less.

The initiative also allowed CEBRI to exercise its social responsibility. About 60% of the participants, among students, women and representatives of civil society, received partial or full scholarships. In addition, in order to support families affected by the pandemic in the state of Rio de Janeiro, 10% of the course's revenue was donated to Movimento União Rio (Rio Union Movement) for the purchase of 500 staple food baskets.

Initiatives such as the Energy Transition Program, a partnership between CEBRI, the Inter-American Development Bank (IDB) and the Energy Research Office (EPE), and the course on the history of Brazilian diplomacy, among others, have gained wide visibility in the press and on social media. As a result, CEBRI was directly mentioned more than 400 times in Brazil's main media and news outlets, and it now has more than 50,000 followers on social networks.

These achievements were only possible with the support of our members, the outstanding presence and leadership of our Trustees and Senior Fellows, and the unity and commitment of our team.

Best Regards,

José Pio Borges
Chairman of the Board of Trustees at CEBRI

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE FIRST HALF OF 2021

CEBRI celebrates its 23rd anniversary with a new brand identity and a new website

The new logo was created by designer Felipe Taborda, and the website, which is more dynamic and functional, was created by Casa 6D. The changes in CEBRI's communications reflect its present moment of greater creativity, dynamism, and proximity to society, especially the new generations of professionals and students. The site gathers all the content produced by CEBRI through publications, events and courses, in a practical and accessible way, both in Portuguese and English.

CEBRI-EPE-IDB launch the Energy Transition Program

CEBRI, the Energy Research Office (EPE) and the Inter-American Development Bank (IDB) launched the Energy Transition Program, which is one of the most innovative initiatives on the subject in Brazil. The objective is to present scenarios, aiming to achieve the goal of carbon neutrality by 2060. In the program's first stage, held between April and May 2021, panels of specialists presented analyses about trends and uncertainties for the sector. Check out the discussions in the reports available on the website's Energy Program section.

CEBRI meets with the President of the Brazilian Senate’s Committee on Foreign Relations and National Defense

The president of the Senate’s Committee on Foreign Relations and National Defense, Kátia Abreu, participated in a closed meeting with CEBRI’s experts. The agenda included relations with China, the environment and sustainable development in the Amazon, diplomatic relations, and Brazil’s response to the pandemic.

What is the Future of Multilateralism?

For the past two years, CEBRI and the Konrad Adenauer Foundation (KAS) have been developing a program on multilateralism. In 2021, the project “Global Political and Economic Realignments: Implications for Brazil” presents four focus areas: 1) Global realignments and foreign policy formulation: national and regional spaces and global insertion; 2) Trade and transformations in the international political economy; 3) Technological innovation and sustainable growth; 4) Crises of the Anthropocene, global health and building consensus for multilateral policies.

XVIII FORTE
Forte de Copacabana International Security Conference

SAVE THE DATE 16-17 September 2021

*“Does No War Mean Peace?
International Security Strategies in a New Geopolitical World Order”*

KONRAD ADENAUER STIFTUNG CEBRI

International security strategies in a new geopolitical world order will be on the agenda at the XVIII Forte de Copacabana International Security Conference to be held September 16 and 17.

The theme that will be addressed at the largest international security conference in Latin America poses an important question: “Does no war mean peace? The discussions will revolve around three central issues: Global risk management and the role of the Armed Forces; Multilateralism and the role of transnational security alliances; and Cyber responses to crisis situations.

Since 2004, CEBRI has been organizing the conference in partnership with the Konrad Adenauer Foundation (KAS) and the Delegation of the European Union to Brazil (EUDEL). Due to the pandemic, the 2021 edition will be held online with guests participating virtually, in a unique format that will allow interaction with the audience.

Análise: Pandemia abala e reforça conexões globais

Para o economista Claudio Frischtak, conselheiro do Centro Brasileiro de Relações Internacionais (Cebri), o mundo sairá mais pobre dessa crise, com impactos fortes no mercado de trabalho, em particular nos setores informais e mais frágeis, e na educação, dada a dificuldade de acesso ao ensino à distância da parcela mais vulnerável da população. Isso causa cicatrizes, afirma ele, que impedem que a retomada econômica seja instantânea.

Há tempos acompanhamos o debate sobre a transição do poder hegemônico no sistema internacional.

No alvorecer do século XXI, enquanto os Estados Unidos se debriçavam sobre a crise do 11 de setembro, a China era descrita como um dos BRICS, o acrônimo originalmente criado pelo banco de investimentos Goldman Sachs, e que também englobava Brasil, Rússia e Índia, além de incluir, mais tarde, a África do Sul.
